Jacob Van Girten had been kuown es a miser for thirty years, and at his death people looked for a large sum of money to turn up. Jake, as he was always referred to, lived on a farm about three miles from the village of, to participate in it, the sheriff did his Castile. It was a farm of eighty acres, whole duty. While they could not legally compel him to do anything, the case was put to him so strongly that he finally consented to pay a sturdy young man a small sum weekly for sleeping in the house with him at night and acting as a guard and defender. This service continued for two years, and then the end came. The guard was not there in the daytime, and one evening when Ife made his appearance at the usual hour he found the old man dead in his rocking chair. He seemed to have passed away while sleeping.

This theory, which seemed quite plausible, led to some funny results. Every farmer for two miles around began searching his barn and sheds, thinking they might have been made the depository, and scores of men looked for hollow trees and stumps and went digging in what they thought were likely places. In the meantime the old house was submitted to the most careful and thorough search. It was a cottage, with parlor, bedroom and kitchen below and a half garret upstairs. The miser occupied the bedroom and the guard the parlor, both sleeping on the floor on straw beds. The kitchen was furnished with an old rusty stove and a meager supply of dishes, and Jake and at All Industrial Mining Cen-Probable Throughout France.

Paris, April /1.—The people of France have been wrought up to a state of apprehension concerning the imminince of a crisis May I, when all ranks of labor will make a gigantic eight-hour demonstration. It is feared lawless elements may get the upper lawless element may get the upper hand and this inspires the public with a feeling of terror bordering on panic. Some of the newspapers freely assert that the movement is the prelude of a revolution in which the proletariat in- you can find and cover the top of tends to overthrow the existing regime. Some of the reports picture the business and residential parts of Paris about to be sacked, the streets barricaded, and, in brief, a veritable renewal of the commune.

The actual state of the labor agitation is as follows: About 40,000 minfrequent affrays take place, but the presence there of 25,000 troops and wholesale arrests of the ring leaders have measurably restored calm. In the same part of the country the iron and glass workers of Denain are on strike, but most of them resumed work today, owing to the stern repression light. of the authorities. In Brest all branches of labor have voted for a general strike similar to the general strike at Lorient and at many other points. In Paris the striking postmen printers, 6,000 employes of the jewelry trades and 4,000 persons employed in the paper trades are still out. These strikes, however, have not been accompanied by rioting. This is a precursor of the national labor movement to be inaugurated May 1, when it is expected for a day and perhaps for a longer perother branches of labor decided today to quit from May 1 to May 15 without violence. Employes of grocers, dairymen, butchers and bakers and all purveyors of food supplies as well as hotel servants give promise of a decision for a similar cessation of work

In the meantime the government appears to have awakened to the neces sity of stern measures. This is indicated by the assembling of troops. Sixty thousand soldiers will be on duty in Paris May 1. An official communication announces that the ministers will meet Saturday to complete final precantions.
